ABOUT THE REPORT

Leadership & Race: A Call to Each Other, Exploration of the Current Racial Justice Landscape and Recommendations for Action explores leadership and race beyond structural racism and offers guidance to leaders, intermediaries, and those in philanthropy seeking progress toward racial justice.

As we wrote this report, we acknowledge that we, too, are experiencing much of what we will discuss in this report - they are not just words on a page. Though there are moments of celebration and hope here, much of the content is weighty, and you may experience that weight in your body and spirit.

We worked with over 25 leaders and reviewed dozens of articles, white papers, and other material to complete our capture of race and leadership in 2024. Our collective hope is that this report will be grounded in relationships, inspire new relationships, and deepen pre-existing relationships. In short, we hope you felt seen somewhere in here. This report is meant to be space for us and each other.

ABOUT LEADERSHIP LEARNING COMMUNITY

Leadership Learning Community (“LLC”) is a national organization that believes leadership is the site of transformation. We know efforts in diversity, inclusion, and race equity are important for changing the systems in place, and alone, they are not enough to uproot oppressive practices and advance the transformation we seek. Additionally, our social good sector is experiencing high rates of burnout, becoming a revolving door for people of color and perpetuating physical, mental, spiritual, and emotional duress. We believe it’s time to hold more spaces grounded in collective liberation. To do this, we facilitate and encourage the unlearning of oppressive structures, the engagement of communities of practice that create new cultural norms, and the development of tools and frameworks that allow us to align our values and actions. We work with leaders globally, particularly those from historically excluded communities such as Black, Indigenous, immigrant, people of color, LGBTQIA+, and people with disabilities, and invite them to live out the compelling vision of liberation - one which seeks power, joy, and thriving for all people. Together, we create spaces for leaders to run, fund, and study practices rooted in collective liberation (rather than systemic oppression). We call this liberatory leadership.
